DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Like its neighbor to the south, this dwelling is three bays wide and three stories tall. The weatherboard walls are painted white and the trim is painted turquoise. Across the facade is a one story hip roof porch supported on round Doric columns with plain balustrade between. Both the porch and main 'A' roof are covered with raised seam tin roofing. On the north side of the dwelling is a chimney partially stuccoed. Beneath the wood porch, between grey stuccoed piers is a wide lattice. The window and door trim on the first story has been replaced, probably when the windows were lengthened and the sash changed to 1/1. Only the third story sash are original with 3/3 sash. Originally the house had shutters, like the Smithers house across the street.

To the rear of the building is a two story wing with partially enclosed porch on the south side, built even with the south side of the front portion of the house.

Access to the principal door is from the south. A concrete walk extends to the rear of the yard at the end of which can be seen a small utility house.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Architecturally the McLean House is similar to the Benson House next door and the Cooling-Karsner House across the street. Its presence maintains the vertical emphasis which is common to the second phase of building in town, and for which the town is noteworthy.

Captain Furman Layman, proprietor of the Bayard House Hotel, built this house for his family about 1849, when he leased the ground from the Bayards. In 1889, Henry Brady bought the house for $1,000 from the estate of Rebecca Brady to whom it passed from the Layman's. The house remains a one family dwelling having served as home for several families, among them, Nowlands, Rosins, Dickinsons, Foards, Coolings, and the present owner, Mr. McLean.

The house's only significance lies in its being owned by Furman Layman prominent boat captain and hotel keeper, and Henry Brady, local entrepreneur in the latter half of the nineteenth century.
